HISTORIC MARTINEZ

Long before California became a state, Martinez was a small town fully platted on the map of the Contra Costa District of Upper California. It all began with Mexican Land Grants in the 1830's. For services rendered to the government, Don Ignacio Martinez received 17,000 acres in the Alhambra Valley. With his death, his eleven children inherited the property in 1849.

San Francisco businessman William Smith then married one of Martinez's daughters, and established a trading post which catalyzed growth of the town in 1849. In the following year, the California Gold Rush brought the first of several booms that left their marks over the next 130 years.

During the 1870's and 1880's, the City of Martinez flourished as a governmental and trade center. Incorporated in 1876, the town was previously designated as the County Seat of Contra Costa County. As the County Seat, growth was assured; and judges, lawyers and businesses to serve their needs were established. Martinez became a major shipping port, based primarily on lucrative grain trade between California's central valley and international ports-of-call. Notable events in this period include the founding of the Contra Costa Gazette in 1858 (today the Martinez News-Gazette), the shaping of the downtown business district in the 1870's, completion of the intercontinental railroad through Martinez in 1876, operation of the longest running ferry service west of the Mississippi River, and the establishment of a home by famed naturalist John Muir, the founder of the National Parks System. In addition, scattered throughout town are many 1865 to 1910 homes, in every style of Victorian and turn-of-the-century motif.

Rumors of oil companies coming to Martinez set off a real estate rush in 1912. After the Shell Oil Company located in Martinez in 1915, the City blossomed into the regional cultural center and marketplace through the 1940's. Hundreds of families arrived with the advent of Shell, spurring a flurry of residential and commercial construction which dominates the Old Town to this day. Notable commercial structures which remain today include the Curry Theater (1914); National Bank of Martinez (1924); City Hall Apartments (1913); Bergamini Building (1906); Contra Costa Gas Company (1916), and the Oehm Hotel (1914). Growth of the commercial core peaked in the late 1920's and the City maintained its regional prominence through World War II.

In the 1950's and 60's, rapid suburbanization and modern shopping mall development in the neighboring Diablo Valley contributed to economic decline in the downtown Martinez area. In recent years, economic vitality is returning to the Downtown as local merchants capitalize on the area's historical ambiance, new recreational opportunities, and stable employment base.

THE HISTORIC RESOURCE INVENTORY

From this heritage, Martinez has today, a wealth of historic buildings and sites which enrich the community culturally and architecturally. Over 80 buildings have been inventoried as being architecturally or historically significant. One of these, the John Muir Home, has been designated as a National Historic Site; two others have been designated as California Historic Landmarks. Efforts are now underway to have the Alhambra Cemetery designated as a California Historic Landmark.

Some private building owners have been active in renovating downtown residential and commercial structures. They have recently been presented with Refurbishment Awards by the Martinez City Council in recognition of their efforts and commending their contribution to the economic resurgence of downtown Martinez. Unfortunately, many structures have been torn down to meet the needs of new development, particularly where the County government has expanded. Still, others are behind false facades constructed over the years to bring the building's appearance "up-to-date".

It is in the City's best interest to promote the preservation of those buildings which have historical or architectural significance. Public improvements based on a historical theme such as the new brick sidewalks, street signs and turn-of-the-century street lights have made a substantial aesthetic change in the downtown's appearance. These improvements represent a nearly one million dollar investment by the City and downtown property owners. The continued renovation of buildings is imperative in completing the restoration of the downtown area's historical ambiance.

To assist downtown building owners in these efforts, the Planning staff in conjunction with the Martinez Historical Society has undertaken an Historical Resource Inventory. The Inventory cites structures throughout the City which are historically significant on a local level in terms of architecture or as sites of historical events. This Inventory can be used as a means of implementing the State Historic Building Code within the City. This Code respects the structural and design limitations of older buildings which limit their applicability to modern building codes. It is anticipated that the use of the Historic Building Code will allow many owners of historic structures to renovate structures that were previously restricted by modern Codes.

John Muir Home (1882)	4202 Alhambra Ave.	x	x	Dr. John Strentzel, noted horticulturist built this 17 room Victorian mansion. In 1890, it became the home of Strentzel's son-in-law, John Muir, noted conservationist and author. John Muir lived here the last 24 years of his life and wrote many books that had a profound effect on conservation and the national system of forests and parks. The home, known as the John Muir Home, is now owned by the National Park Service and has been restored to the 1906-1914 era. In recognition of Muir's contribution to the natural lore of the nation, President Johnson signed a measure in 1964 that established the John Muir National Historic Site on the National Register. The site has also been designated as a California Historic Landmark.

RESOLUTION NO. 100-82

A RESOLUTION OF THE CITY COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF MARTINEZ ESTABLISHING PROCEDURES PERTAINING TO HISTORIC SITES, STRUCTURES AND AREAS.

WHEREAS, there are structures, sites, and areas that are reminders of past eras, events, and persons important in local, state, or national history or which provide significant examples of architectural styles of the past; or which are unique and irreplaceable assets to the City, and

WHEREAS, the preservation and encouragement of a City of varied architectural styles reflects the distinct phases of its history: cultural, social, economic, political, and architectural; and

WHEREAS, the development and maintenance of appropriate settings and environment for such sites and structures is essential for the enhancement and the stabilization of neighborhoods and areas of the City.

WHEREAS, the preservation and renovation of historic sites and structures provides definitive beautification improvements that will help stimulate other such activity and contribute to the economic resurgence of the City.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, by the City Council of the City of Martinez that a list of structures and other features of historic, architectural, or aesthetic merit deemed deserving of official recognition be approved, even though they have not been designated as landmarks and are not situated in designated historic districts, in order that the Historical Building Code can be applied to said list. Additions to said list may also be added to from time to time.
